CITIZENS TO ESTABLISH THEIR OUR EDUCATIONAL FUND

There has been discussion, during past months, in the communities served by El Capitan High School, of community scholarship aid to deserving students who need assistance to continue their education in college, technical, or trade schools.

A meeting was held August 30, at the home of Dr. and Mrs. S. S. Sloan, the purpose of which was to form an organization which would work for "Dollars for Scholars". Attending the meeting were Mrs. Allan Ross, chairman; Dr. and Mrs. Sloan, Messrs. John Barrons, Claar Tietsort, and L. E. Woodward. The student committee for El Capitan High School was represented by "Doc" Steward and Ricky Strandlund.

Groundwork was laid for formation of the El Capitan Community Scholarship Foundation. The Foundation will be a non-profit organization dedicated to the idea that our community, by its own efforts, can make it possible for deserving students to have a vacation to Albion in Northern California for a rest.

The Gamma Gammas held their meeting at the home of the president Jolaine Huey with Renie Adams as co-hostess.

Joanne Nichols, receptionist in Dr. Woodall's office, is in El Cajon Valley Hospital temporarily for observation.

Mr. and Mrs. Pace and family of Tavern Road at Ball's Ranch left Sept. 12 moving to Virginia.

GROSSMONT BOND ELECTION

Grossmont Union High School District Citizens Advisory Committee met Sept. 13 to discuss the forthcoming Grossmont College bond election and the high school district's tax limit election, both set for October 10. John Hansen, president of Grossmont College and members of his staff told C. A. C. members about the program being offered in the college now operating along with Monte Vista High School in the new high school plant on Sweetwater Springs Boulevard.

Mrs. John Morrow, C. A. C. chairman for 1961-62, scheduled a question and answer session to acquaint new members from combetter future, and also assist the community to improve and prosper.

The philosophy behind the plan is that there are lots of good boys and girls in our area who perhaps can't win top scholarships to big schools, but if they want college or technical training and need help to go, they ought to have it since they're willing to work for it. A similar plan for a citizen's scholarship foundation has worked successfully elsewhere. Already, interest and support have been given to the El Capitan Community Scholarship Foundation, and it is believed the people of our local communities will wish to have an additional share in this worthwhile community effort.

A September 15th meeting is scheduled.

Life With The Rimples By Les Carroll

by JACKIE WELTY
 Tom: I woke up last night with the feeling that my watch was gone. So I looked for it.
 John: Was it gone?
 Tim: No, but it was going.
 Mary: Teacher, is it true that the law of gravity keeps us on the earth.

 Teacher: Yes, that's true.
 Mary: What did we do before that law was passed?
 A teacher was taking her class through a tour of a museum, and they were quite noisy. Halting them, the teacher said, "I want it so quiet I can hear a pin drop."
 About a minute went by of absolute silence, and then one of the pupils piped up. "Well, let'er drop."

munity organizations with Proposition 1 which would authorize $8 million in bonds for construction of a building to house the newly organized college and Proposition B which would restore the high school district expiring tax ceiling of $1.25 per $100 of assessed valuation and add 25¢ to that limit. C. A. C. also heard a discussion of Proposition A which would authorize the high school district to issue bonds in the amount of $1,800,000. Funds were approved by voters in 1959 but state regulations have changed and require this second approval.

Gardener's Checklist

- by Calif. Assn. of Nurserymen
1. Start planting ranunculus and anemones this month for early spring bloom.
  2. Fuchsias will continue to bloom freely only if faded blossoms and seed pods are removed. Water by overhead sprinkling so as to moisten the leaves.
  3. If bearded iris develop spotted foliage, remove the infected leaves and spray plant with a fungicide.
  4. Mildew can be a problem in September. Spray roses, begonias, dahlias and other susceptible plants with recommended sprays.
  5. Sweet peas and other cool season annuals should go in at the earliest possible time.

POLIO IMMUNIZATION

The new State law requiring polio immunization for school enrollment will not go into effect until sometime in January at the earliest, according to the California State Department of Public Health.
 Dr. J. B. Askew, director of public health for San Diego County, urged parents, however, to have their children immunized against paralytic polio by their family physician at the earliest possible time.
 When enforced the law will apply to all public, private and parochial schools from kindergarten through junior college. It does not cover child care centers and parent cooperative nursery schools.

"Although the law does not apply to the pre-school child, it is extremely important that every child be immunized against polio at a very early age," Dr. Askew said. "The greatest number of paralytic polio cases reported in San Diego County in the past have occurred among pre-school children," he said.
 The law will require all children and adults enrolling as pupils in schools covered by the law to show proof of one polio inoculation prior to admission. Pupils must also show evidence of "diligent completion" of the required series of inoculations after enrollment.

Dr. Askew said the law exempts those who have personal objections to immunization. It also exempts those whose personal physician advises against inoculations.
 Even though pupils have already been enrolled for the fall term, they will be required to show proof of polio immunization in January. By that time, Dr. Askew said, the State Board of Health regulations will specify a vaccination time schedule, how many inoculations will be required and what type of proof of vaccination will be required.

As soon as the State regulations are known, the San Diego Department of Public Health in cooperation with the San Diego County Medical Society, will make plans. Dr. Askew said, to make available some type of immunization program for pupils required by law to be immunized.

Briefly on Beauty

Forever Growing Old
 As we all know, we are growing older every year. What we may not know, however, is that as we grow older our complexions change. It is important to use the make-up which best fits our complexion needs. So, check often to see that the present make-up is the right one.

SPIRIT

Almost everyone knows that if he tied his right arm behind him for several months he would lose the use of the arm. We all know that we must use our bodies if they are to remain strong and healthy.

Most people also know that the same is true of the mind. Regardless of the finest natural intelligence the man who has never studied and learned is a dull clod as compared with the man who has used and sharpened his intellect.

But man is more than body and mind. The one great thing about a person is his existence as a spiritual being. Yet in so many lives the spiritual existence is taken for granted.

Unused and neglected the spirit of man remains a weak and almost unused part of existence. In some lives it is crippled and bound until it seems to wither away almost to nothingness. Cynical self-blinded people too often reject their own most glorious selves as a mean parent might reject a beautiful child.

The spirit is the God in man. It is only through the spirit that man finds his relationship with the Infinite or with his fellowman. But like the body or the mind the spirit comes to its own only if it is cultivated, used and encouraged to grow. Only the person who takes time for meditation, silence, and communion with the Infinite can find purpose in life, true strength for meaningful living or peace of mind when the day is done.

WAR DIARY by BERT FULLER Part 7

(Still at the Point) Goodall signaled to return. We started back down the coast and had just reached Vegia Point, two miles below Quinauan, when the Nips made another run on us. We dusted off one more. He crashed into a hill to the north. Two more joined the attack and circled to come in with the sun. We couldn't see them and the only thing we could do was fire directly into the sun and hope. I looked over at Goodall's boat about 200 yards away and he had all guns going. He was firing at the planes with a Lewis machine gun.

We didn't spot the planes until they were releasing their bombs. Crowder and Newman were on one of the forward fifty's. I saw one plane start smoking and Crowder yelled at Newman, "Lieutenant, we got the damn plane, get the bombs before they get us." A million to one chance, which failed. The bombs came down; one hit directly in front of us; two off the port side and one astern. It felt like the whole damn world turned over.

Just before they hit, I hollered, "Hit the deck." Some of the crew did, but Smitty, Jackson, and Harris remained standing, still firing at the planes as they passed overhead. When I picked myself up, Crowder and Newman were tangled up together. Jackson was standing amidst ships holding his left hand, what was left of it. I looked past his hand and could see that part of his chest had been torn away with shrapnel. Smitty was in the bottom of the boat motionless. Harris was standing in a daze on one side of the boat with his beard burned completely off one side of his face. The bomb had exploded right in his face. I tried to stand and realized for the first time that something was wrong. My right side felt like it was on fire but I could still walk. Jackson fell forward in Harris' arms and died. I looked again at Smitty. He had been torn to pieces. The coxswain was knocked out and the boat was adrift. I took the tiller and told the engineer to give it hell. He did and we managed to make the beach before taking too much water. I saw Goodall's boat seem to rise in the water and then turn over, pieces flying in every direction. As we hit the beach we abandoned ship. The coxswain was up and we had to leave Smitty and Bobo in the boat.

The Nip dive bombers came in again for a strafing run along the beach to try to get as many of us as possible. We spread out and I told Crowder and Harris to make for Goodall's boat if possible while I climbed the hill for help. One of the scouts was climbing with me. The Nip planes made another run and knocked the scout off the cliff. It was almost straight up and took some time to make the climb. At the top I found some Philippine Army troops. They had thirty and fifty calibre guns mounted on the point within range of the planes we had been fighting still they had not fired a shot.

They had a telephone which I used to call Commander Bridget at Mariveles. I gave him the names of the dead and wounded with a full report of what had happened. While I was telephoning a first aid man plugged my wounds with gauze. An army major came running up and wanted to know what all the shooting was about. He explained that he was in charge of the sector so I asked him for help in removing the men from the boats. He said it would be impossible to go down on the beach until the dive bombers had stopped strafing. I started down the cliff and he told me to stop, that it was an order. I told him I was the skipper of the boat on the beach and I was going down to it. When I got there, examining Smitty and Bob three of the scouts came out of the rocks where they had been hiding and joined me.

We gave aid to Goodall's crew as best we could. Commander Goodall had had both heels blown off. We carried him up the cliff and by that time the ambulances were there from Mariveles. We had four dead and five wounded. When we reached Mariveles the wounded were taken to the hospital while Smitty, Jackson, and the two Canopus men were prepared for burial at the Mariveles cemetery. I made my report to Commander Bridget that the mission had been completed. Commander Goodall had passed out or it would have been his place to make the report. I reported to sickbay where the Doc removed four pieces of shrapnel and patched up my side where a Nip 27 had gone through. The four men were buried at sunset.

General Pierce called Commander Bridget to tell of the success of the mission. Two hundred thirty Nips had been counted on the beach and the General gave us credit for two planes down and three damaged. They had also found eight dead Philippine girls in the large cave. The Nips had obviously held them prisoners for immoral purposes.

One the following day the Nips started landings near Bigac. General Wainwright led the remaining cavalry and tanks in an attempt to repel the landings but the Nips were landing by the thousands. Several of our tanks were knocked out in the first few rounds. Two of them were bodded down in the sand along the beach and were captured by the Nips. Our forces were pushed back into the hills during the afternoon. The following morning General Wainwright had mustered everything he had to fight with and made a counter attack on the Nips. He fought his way down the beach and scattered the Nips up and down the coast. I was on a patrol with Tate and a few scouts when I passed General Wainwright returning from Bigac and Moran. He had twenty mounted troops with him and all of them were as bloody as slaughtered hogs. Tate and I returned to G-2 when the General made his report.

He had fought his way down to the beach where the tanks had been lost the day before. What he found was enough to make your blood turn to water. The Nips had surrounded the tanks which were bogged down, thrown sand in through the ports around the gun mounts until the crews were waist deep in sand, then poured gasoline in and touched it off. The crew was burned beyond recognition.

On February 18, 1942, Commander Bridget called all the officers and chiefs together and told us that we had orders from General McArthur to report to the Senior Army Officer on Fort Hughes for duty as beachguards. The next afternoon I went up to the front to see Colonel Fisher. I found him sitting back of his tent whittling a piece of bamboo. One of the scouts had made him a present of a Japanese broadsword. It was a beautiful piece of work and the Colonel was making a case for it.

While there Wermuth came in and I told him I was leaving during the night for Fort Hughes. He wanted to go along as things were getting a little warm on Bataan. He gave me the same .45 he had let me use before and said I could give it back to him when we recaptured Manila. He really believed we would win the city back, even though we had only seven miles of Bataan Peninsula at the time.

Create your shot BY SAM SWING

Don't let hazards get you down. You can go over or around. Create your own shot—fade or hook—to avoid hazards, particularly those around the greens. Think in terms of what you want the ball to do. Adjust your stance to allow for a fade or a hook. Play the ball to go around the hazard lying in the path of a straight-to-the-green shot. On approaches to the green, forget about the pin and aim only for the green. The pros play it this way. Why not you?
